

Abstract

The present invention embodies a zigzag member made up of relatively sharp angles where each side is spread out in an alternate direction from the next. The present invention allows the user to hold their hair back away from their face without the cumbersome bar of a traditional hair comb and creates texture in the hair by spreading apart each section of hair, between each zigzag.